If the parents of the child are not married it is important for parents to acknowledge parentage of the child. The following is information about acknowledging parentage and the rights and responsibilities that are connected to acknowledging parentage.

When the Acknowledgment of Parentage is signed, the parents are agreeing that they are aware of the following:

- The parents have signed the Acknowledgment of Parentage of their own free will.
- The parents understand that acknowledging parentage means they are saying they are the parents of the named child for all purposes.
- The Acknowledgment of Parentage establishes a legal parent/child relationship.
- The Acknowledgment of Parentage may be used in any legal actions about the child.
- The parents know they may have to pay financial and medical support for the child.
- After signing the Acknowledgment of Parentage, the parent's name will be put on the child's birth certificate.
- The Acknowledgment of Parentage does not give either parent custody or visitation rights. They may go to court for these and other rights or responsibilities to be decided.
- The parents may choose not to acknowledge parentage.
- The parents have the right to talk to an attorney, have an attorney represent them, have genetic tests done, ask the court to decide on parentage and/or acknowledge parentage later. The parents have the right to know about any court hearing on parentage and may take witnesses to court and cross examine witnesses.
- The parents may change their mind about acknowledging parentage after signing this form. Under Colorado law, the Acknowledgment of Parentage will be an adjudication of parentage within sixty days after the parents sign it. If either parent changes their mind, they must contact their juvenile county court or their private attorney or the court within 60 days after signing it or before any legal action is taken with the child and the parent(s), whichever is first. Genetic tests for parentage may be done and the parents may have to pay for the genetic tests.
- There is no charge to you for processing this form if it is completed at the time of birth and prior to registration. Leave this form with the hospital staff or midwife who will submit it to the Colorado Vital Records Section for you.

Advisement to Hospital and Midwife

Colorado Statute § 25-2-112 Section 5.2 states that if the mother was not married at the time of conception or birth, the name of the second parent shall be entered if the mother and the person to be named as the parent so request in writing on a form prescribed and furnished by the State Registrar - Acknowledgment of Parentage. This is a legal document which will be used to add the parent's information to the child's birth certificate. The information must be printed clearly and in black ink. Cross outs and/or white out are not acceptable.

Mother Refusing to List Spouse

If the mother was married at the time of conception or birth, or any time in between, and is refusing to list the spouse/ex-spouse, the mother must complete Section A & B. In Section D, write "refused" across the area. If mother is not present to sign, the registrar may sign Section D. In this case neither the ex-spouse nor the second parent will then be listed on the birth record.
