Adams County News & Information Making Connections in SW Adams County Plan Neighborhood Meeting

The Adams County Long Range Strategic Planning Office will host a neighborhood meeting on May 2, 2016, 6-8:30 p.m., at the Skyview Campus Student Center, 8990 York St., Thornton, to solicit public input and feedback on the Making Connections in Southwest Adams County Plan. Residents will participate in an interactive meeting to help in the prioritization of the top infrastructure and policy projects for potential strategic investment. Simultaneous translation in Spanish and English will be provided.

The Making Connections in SW Adams County Plan is a process designed to coordinate and prioritize the implementation of a variety of envisioned and planned projects to improve how Adams County residents get to work and school, where businesses locate and homes are built, and the necessary infrastructure and systems to respond to changing needs and trends while promoting a high quality of life for all residents.

The Making Connections plan area is generally bounded south of 96th Ave, north of 52nd Ave., east of Sheridan and west of Brighton Road.

“After several months of input from citizens and other regional partners, we are identifying the projects and project areas that will help the most people on a daily basis,” said Abel Montoya, director of Long Range Strategic Planning. “This may include new sidewalks to allow kids to walk to school or RTD stops, improving access to parks and trails, and economic development opportunities to attract quality jobs.”
